Cheap imports from China push up the price of petrol

by Steve Johnson

DON'T FOR one moment think you are getting a bargain when you buy a product that has been brought into this country from China.

Next time you fill up your car with petrol just remember that you are paying back at the pumps the money, and more, you thought you might have saved on those cheap 'Made in China' clothes and consumer goods you bought.

Petrol prices across the UK are now passing £4 a gallon (87.9p a litre) for the first time ever and they won't be coming down.

The reason for the latest price surge is that the Chinese are buying up more and more of the world's oil to fuel their booming economy - an economy booming on the back of flooding Britain and other Western countries with cheap imports, made with low-cost labour.

The price of crude oil hit $60.65 by early July. An increase of 60% on this time last year and the steepest increase in more than 25 years. Previous oil price hikes of this sort, as in 1973 and 1979, were caused by the Islamic-run

OPEC oil producers' cartel artificially hiking prices for political anti-Western reasons. Not this time. OPEC is not to blame now.

As AA Motoring Trust petrol industry specialist, Ruth Bridger, explained on July 10th:

"While OPEC has increased production there is a limit to refining capacity and this has almost been reached. The industry is struggling to come to terms with a massive increase in demand from China where the economy is growing at a phenomenal rate".

You can't blame the Chinese

Bring our soldiers home for Christmas

"Our soldiers are being killed on the streets of Basra and now British civilians are being killed on the streets of London"

HAS TONY BLAIR lost his marbles claiming that the Islamic terrorist attacks in London are not connected to the war in Iraq?

His well-rehearsed stuttering and choreographed looks of disbelief for the world's media over the actions of religious fanatics living in our midst, might have convinced a few but it just brought snorts of derision from the majority of British people.

The indiscriminate slaughter of innocent people going about their daily business by suicide bombers are copy cat attacks of what takes place every day in Iraq. The attack on London is most likely in response to our Government's involvement in the war in Iraq.

The British National Party was critical of the sabre-rattling by George Bush and Tony Blair prior to the removal of Saddam Hussein and opposed the invasion of Iraq because it wasn't in the interests of the British people.

Now our soldiers are being killed on the streets of Basra and British civilians are being

RAMADAN: Previously banned from Britain for supporting terrorist attacks in Israel and Iraq.

Officer's worry over Met chief's invite

WHEN Metropolitan Police Commissioner, Sir Ian Blair, invited a fanatical Muslim agitator to address a conference sponsored by the police, thankfully there was a sane voice to speak out in opposition.

Ian Blair's invite to Tariq Ramadan would be bizarre at the best of times, but in the light of the London terrorist attack it was insensitive to the families of the victims of the attack.

Ramadan had his visa for the United States revoked last year for security reasons and he was previously banned from Britain for his support of terrorist attacks in Israel and Iraq.

The invitation was criticised by Norman Brennan, a serving police officer who heads the Victims of Crime Trust.

He said: "To allow him into the UK is bad enough, but to also sponsor him is just ridiculous. Sometimes the Association of Chief Police Officers (Acpo) is so politically correct that it crosses the line of common sense."

Police told 67 ways to attract minorities

POLICE forces in Scotland have been branded 'racist' by the Commission for Racial Equality (CRE) because they have failed to recruit enough officers from ethnic minorities over the past four years. A CRE report claims that out of a total of 15,963 officers in Scotland, only 118 – just 0.7% – are recorded as being black or Asian. To address this imbalance it makes SIXTY-SEVEN recommendations, from extra diversity courses for white officers to time off for Friday prayers for Muslim officers.

Sandra Deslandes-Clark, of Semper Scotland, a support group for black and ethnic minority officers, said the recruitment problem would not be addressed until more black officers were promoted.

Clergy told 'stay quiet'

CLERGY are so nervous of offending Muslims that they are no longer promoting the Christian faith.

A Church of England report found priests were so fearful of saying the wrong thing they had become 'ineffective in their ministries'.

Dr Patrick Sookhdeo, a priest and director of the Institute for the Study of Islam and Christianity, said:

"There are clergymen who have been threatened and attacked. But if they go to their bishop they find he is concerned only that the story might become public and damage inter-faith relations. The advice to them is often: Stay quiet, or lose your job."

Have a guess who's pushing Brits on to the dole?

UNEMPLOYMENT has risen for the fourth successive month making it the longest run of increases for 13 years.

Economist, Michael Saunders from the Citigroup, believes that the figures show that Britons are being replaced in their jobs by migrant workers from the new EU states.

"This extra supply of relatively young and low-paid workers may be displacing UK residents," he said.

"It is notable the claimant count has risen among people under 25 since mid 2004."

It is because of the flood of migrant workers into Britain that the Government's labour market data can claim that there is a rise in numbers in work as the increase in population exceeded the number of jobs available.

Job vacancies fell for retailers, manufacturers and transport companies, bringing the number of manufacturing jobs lost since Labour came to power above the 1 million mark.

QUEUING UP TO CASH IN ON BRITAIN: Asylum seekers, refugees and economic migrants are travelling across Europe to come here to access the Welfare State which British people have spent a lifetime paying into.

The cost of the asylum chaos

IT COSTS £11,000 to deport Leach failed asylum seeker from Britain, and the Government tells us that there are 283,500 on their list to be returned to the country they came from.

If Charles Clarke and his Home Office team can still find these immigrants who came to Britain to cash in on our benefits system, it will cost the British taxpayer over £3.1 billion just to deport them.

A highly critical report by the National Audit Office published last month exposed the chaos of the asylum system, with a catalogue of failings including financial mismanagement and near-shambolic record keeping.

The report cast doubt on the Labour Government's own asylum figure of 283,500, believing it to be a 'gross underestimation'.

Last year alone, it cost us £300 million just to deal with the removal of a paltry 25,000 failed asylum seekers, and another £300 million to feed, accommodate and support them while

Paying over the odds to house asylum seekers

TAXPAYERS are being hit with housing bills for asylum seekers which are £25 million more than the real market rate.

The average cost of housing each asylum seeker is £703 a month, with short-term accommodation even more costly at £846.

In all, £439 million was spent housing asylum seekers in just 2003/4 alone out of the total National Asylum Support Service budget of £1.1 billion.

National Audit Office chairman, Sir John Bourn, said:

"Providing suitable accommodation for asylum seekers is one of the most complex and difficult tasks facing the government.

"The Government was stretched to the limit when the number of asylum seekers in accommodation reached over 67,000 back in March 2003."

they waited to leave the country.

A failed asylum seeker stays in Britain for a further 403 days after all their appeals have been completed.

The British National Party believes that genuine asylum seekers should seek refuge in the nearest country from where they are fleeing persecution.

The BNP would refuse any further applications for asylum and stop those coming here to exploit our welfare state from entering at their point of arrival on British soil. They would then be immediately returned to the country from which they bought their ticket to come to Britain.

"The British National Party believes that genuine asylum seekers should seek refuge in the nearest country from where they are fleeing persecution."

Voting BNP stops bogus asylum seekers coming to YOUR area

BACK in April 2003, the Government stopped sending asylum seekers and refugees to Burnley and Blackburn after the BNP vote in both towns increased dramatically and BNP councillors were elected to the local authorities.

Now the Home Office has stopped sending failed asylum seekers to certain areas in Leeds because of an increased vote for the BNP in the last round of local and national elections. The unfair dispersal came to light after George Mudie, the Labour MP for Leeds East complained that some areas of Leeds were taking most of the 2,500 dispersed asylum seekers while others were getting off scot-free.

A council officer for Leeds City Council confirmed that BNP support in an area was one of a set of criteria taken into account when dispersing asylum seekers within the city.

"It's better for everyone if they are settled amongst others from their own communities or in established and 'thriving' multicultural areas," she told Freedom.

Migrant worker hotel left like a 'doss house'

A ONCE proud Norfolk hotel has been vandalised and 'left like a doss house' after it was used as a migrant workers' hostel.

Portuguese, Chinese and Slovakian workers were evicted by officers after West Norfolk council was forced into action after legal notices over planning breaches were ignored.

Andy Piper, the authority's head of housing and environmental health, said that the council had taken control of the property and was boarding it up.

"There are substantial safety risks. The basement is flooded with raw sewage, there are electrical safety concerns and non-working fire alarms.

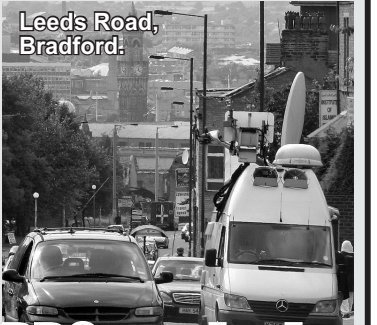

Norfolk Fire Service had warned the council that residents cooking in their room posed a high fire risk.

SO SAD: The once proud Park View Hotel in King's Lynn.

A crowd of locals gathered to watch the eviction and engineers tackle a burst pipe which had been sending water pouring down the Park View's facade. They gave the biggest cheer of the day when one Eastern European woman being evicted shouted:

"I'm going, it's finished. I'm finished with your Grand Britannia."

BBC particular over news footage used

UNDER 24 hours after terrorist attacks in London on Thursday 7th July, a BBC outside broadcast unit could be found parked outside the Leeds Road Mosque in Bradford.

The BBC was 250 miles away from the scene of the bombings to obtain some well-rehearsed statements from carefully selected Muslim clerics.

One of the BBC team admitted this to a Freedom reporter.

Asked whether the BBC would be randomly interviewing Muslims in the street, he shook his head and when he was told there had been stall holders on a Bradford market celebrating the bombings by dancing around displaying the front page of The Sun, he said:

"Yeah, we had heard about that, but it's not the sort of footage we are after."

BBC veto 'terrorist' to raise tolerance levels

BBC: Manipulating public opinion

THE Collins Concise Dictionary definition of 'terrorist' is someone who uses . . . "systematic violence and intimidation to achieve some goal".

The dictionary definition of 'bomber' is . . . "someone who plants bombs".

To describe those that carried out the London Underground attacks as 'terrorists' would imply that they had an agenda, and that their "violence and intimidation" was "to achieve some goal". To describe them just as 'bombers' means there was no political purpose for their violence.

It was because of these distinctly different definitions that the BBC re-edited its initial coverage of the London Underground and bus bombings to avoid labelling the perpetrators as "terrorists".

The Corporation's early reporting of the attacks spoke of terrorists but the same coverage was later changed to describe the attackers simply as "bombers".

Rod Liddle, a former editor of the BBC's Today programme, was upset by the censorship and accused the BBC of "institutionalised political correctness" in its coverage of British Muslims.

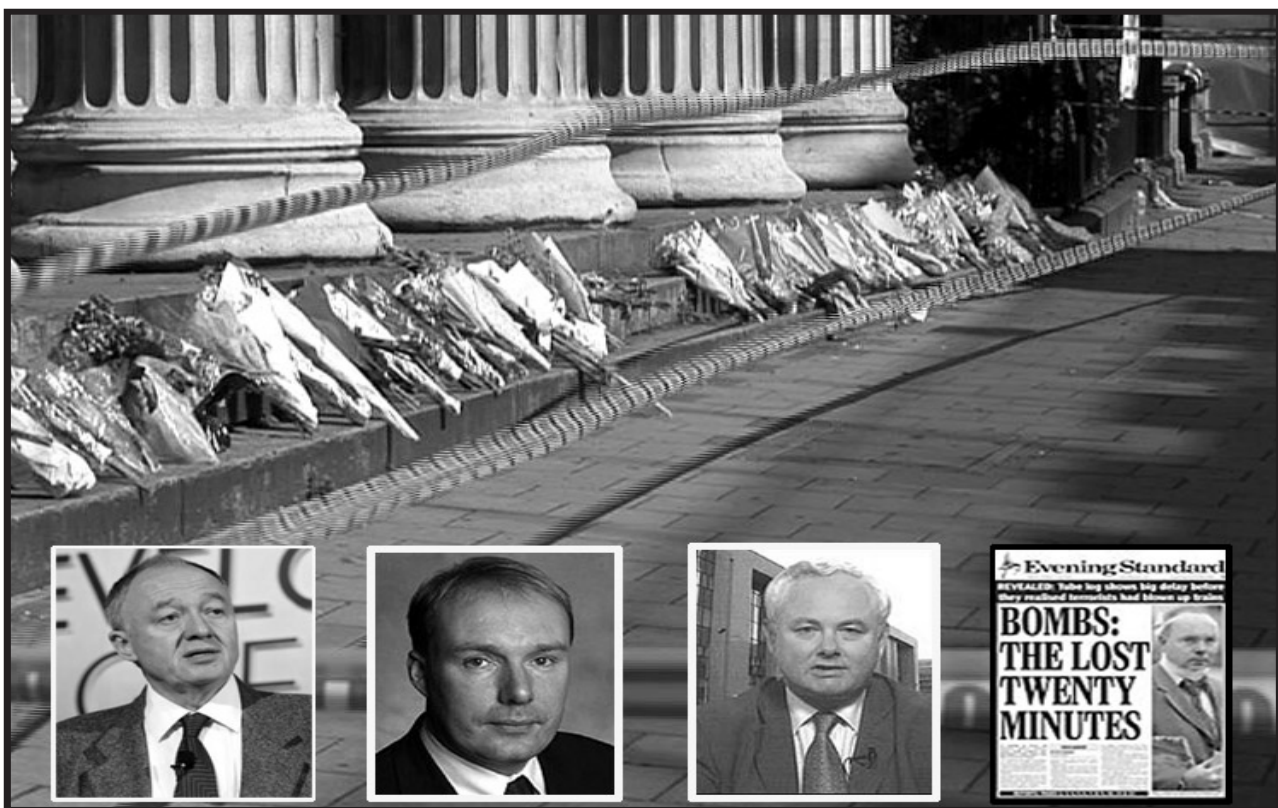

Freedom editor, Martin Wingfield, said that the change of terminology was designed to raise the public's tolerance level.

"The British people would have no sympathy or understanding for fanatical religious zealots killing innocent people to 'achieve some goal'.

"But for four young and misguided, "cricket-loving British lads" who just 'planted bombs', well that's a different story.

"When historians look back on this time, they will probably record with disbelief the arrogance of our media in manipulating the truth and misleading the public just to promote their anti-nationalist and pro-multicultural agenda."

It was the obsession with political correctness that cost lives!

RESPONSIBILITY: The Liberal-Left's PC crusaders. London Mayor, Ken Livingstone, Liberal Democrat MP. Mark Oaten, Keith Best from the Immigration Advisory Service and the London Evening Standard.

Random tube checks would have deterred the terrorists

BACK IN February, London Underground bowed to media and political pressure and banned random immigration checks on Tube passengers.

It was after a campaign by London mayor, Ken Livingstone, Liberal Democrat MP, Mark Oaten, immigrant groups and the London Evening Standard newspaper, that Tube chiefs told the police and the Immigration Service that their officers would no longer be allowed to carry out the checks on the network.

At the time the London Underground triumphantly announced:

"We have established a protocol that no random checks should happen." Livingstone & Co had claimed that officers were unfairly targeting black and Asian passengers.

The London mayor even accused immigration officials of harassing black people by questioning tube passengers speaking non-European languages.

"This looks like harassment of black people by the Immigration Service and I would like to see it completely stopped," he said.

Immigration campaigners also attacked the checks, 'as racist' and 'potentially damaging to the capital's tourist industry.'

Keith Best, the chief executive of the Immigration Advisory Service, said the checks were "enraging large numbers of ordinary citizens stopped without justification."

Liberal Democrat Home Affairs spokesman, Mark Oaten, said:

"Black and Asian people have every right to go about their business on the Underground without being stopped on suspicion of being an illegal immigrant."

But immigration officials said they only questioned London Underground passengers who had been stopped by staff or the Transport police for acting suspiciously. A spokesman explained:

"Trained and experienced officers apply their judgment in specific situations, taking into account a range of factors.

"Police are targeting particular areas at particular times based on their own intelligence and analysis of crime patterns, and immigration officers are working with them."

The threat of random checks on the Tube might well have deterred the London bombers from planting their devices on Thursday 7th July.

The compact tunnels of the London Underground will always be targeted by the terrorists because of the devastation their bombs cause in its confined space.

The British National Party calls for the return of random checks on the London Underground. The safety of the British people should be put before the liberal-left's crusade for political correctness.

- or make way for those who will

PROTECTING BRITAIN from Islamic terror isn't rocket science – but it will take the courage to throw political correctness where it belongs – in the litter-bin of history.

The day when that happens is getting closer with BNP activists all over Britain working harder than ever to spread the message that the Muslim terror threat has its roots in bad political decisions made by successive Labour and Tory governments.

It's time to make people understand that the only chance they have of a return to safety and security is to get rid of the politicians who have brought us 'diversity' and death.

British National Party chairman, Nick Griffin, has set out the most urgent steps needed in the fight against the terror threat:

ETHNIC PROFILING OF SUSPECTS:

It's wrong that political correctness forces police officers searching for the terrorists to stop and search people who are clearly native Britons. They should be concentrating on young men from the ethnic groups which produce the suicide bombers.

HALT IMMIGRATION FROM MUSLIM COUNTRIES:

With the second wave of suicide bombers now known to have been asylum seekers, it is utter madness for the Government to leave Britain's front door open for reinforcements to walk through. The fact that they live on our taxes while planning to bomb our cities merely adds insult to injury and murder.

BAN THE BURQA:

What is the point of having CCTV cameras if terrorists can disguise themselves as the wives of Muslim fundamentalists and prowl our streets undetected behind veils and hoods? This practice needs to be stopped now.

BANNED: The safety and security of the British people must be put before any Islamic agenda pretending to promote diversity.

FIND AND DEPORT THE ILLEGALS:

Even the Home Office has admitted that Britain is now flooded with around 600,000 illegal immigrants. That's one per cent of our entire population, and vast numbers of them come from countries riddled with Islamic extremism. The first step in draining the swamp in which the terrorists hide is to enforce deportation.

REMOVE EXTREMISTS FROM SENSITIVE JOBS:

The belated decision by the Guardian to sack a journalist who was a member of the Islamic extremist Hizb-ut-Tahrir was a start. But there is an even bigger danger from the ones studying chemistry, biology and computer communications in our universities, or working in jobs giving them access to installations such as water treatment plants. This fifth column must be rooted out before they can use our own institutions to launch a terrorist attack against innocent Britons.

Chinese imports and the price of petrol

for taking advantage of the current obsession with "globalisation". Labour, Tory and Lib-Dem alike, with their blind cult of "Free Trade" have left Britain defenceless against the tide of cheap goods which is destroying our jobs and, now, raising the price of our petrol. Chinese demand isn't going away, so nor is dear petrol. Nor is the threat to your job from the Chinese economy guzzling the world's oil. The last two OPEC-caused oil shocks, in 1973 and 1979, led to massive recessions, soaring inflation and unemployment in Britain and that was without cheap imports to wreck our economy further. The last two oil shocks ended when the oil sheiks turned the taps back on, but this time, they can't do that.

Only setting our country free from the shackles of globalisation can save us before it drags us into an economic abyss.

Next time you watch the pounds spinning round faster and faster as you fill up the petrol tank of your car, remember it's because of cheap Chinese consumer goods.

But here is something you can do to stop this happening. You can vote against globalisation and vote for import controls by voting for the British National Party.

Postcard from Great Yarmouth

Plans for Great Yarmouth's first mosque have been submitted to the council by a local Muslim leader.

The mosque would provide prayer and meeting halls as well as an office.

Local residents have objected on the grounds that parking would pose serious problems, but planning officers have suggested the mosque be given a one-year trial.

Practising Muslims pray five times a day - facing towards the holy city Makkah where Mohammad lived.

When PC credentials take priority over a prison sentence

NEWCASTLE City Council's new £60,000-a-year social inclusion officer, Bright Oduro-Kwateng, 49, lives in a council flat near to St James's Park.

He got the job because of his impeccable politically correct credentials - involvement in the campaign for justice for teenager Steven Lawrence, despite being jailed for 12 months for forging passports.

After an outcry from the public, Kwateng was suspended, but now the public service union UNISON is campaigning for his re-instatement.

Local branch official, Ken Bell, said: "Suspending him has been a knee-jerk reaction. It sends out totally the wrong message to the black and ethnic minority community."

A jury at Woolwich Crown Court

KWATENG: Passport forger as well as a Steven Lawrence campaigner.

found Mr Oduro-Kwateng guilty of conspiracy to defraud the Home Office between 1991-98.

Police guilty of anti-white bias

AN EMPLOYMENT Tribunal has criticised Sir Ian Blair, the Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, for victimising three white police officers in the wake of the Macpherson Report.

The Tribunal found the Commissioner responsible for 17 acts of unfavourable treatment against the three officers.

It ruled that, following the Macpherson claim of "institutionalised racism," Ian Blair was so concerned to prove to the public that politically incorrect behaviour would not be tolerated, that the three officers were "hung out to dry" as an example to other officers.

The Met, which is liable for legal costs of around £75,000, has agreed to pay compensation to the three officers involved in the case - Detective Constable Tom Hassell, acting Detective Inspector Paul Whatmore and Detective Sergeant Colin Lockwood.

killed on the streets of London, all in an already doomed effort to stop the Shia and the Suni populations of this desperate region from butchering each other as they have done throughout the last century. It's time to end Tony Blair's ill-conceived adventure in Iraq and bring our troops home now. Whether this will end the terrorist attacks on mainland Britain remains to be seen. A YouGov poll for the Daily Telegraph of British Muslims on 23rd July found that 32% thought that Western society was decadent and immoral and should be brought to an end.

But just how do one-in-three 'moderate' Muslims living in Britain envisage bringing western society to an end . . . maybe our Prime Minister knows more than he is letting on.

Somalis to help police 'Little Somalia'

RESIDENTS in the Dip area of Streatham in South London are feeling increasingly besieged as hundreds of Somalis flock to the streets of what has become known locally as 'Little Somalia'.

Local people complain of intimidation on pavements which are blocked by large groups of young Somali men who congregate to pray and socialise several nights a week. Drug dealing is openly practiced, with Khat - a legal drug in most of Africa but banned in this country - in high demand. In response to public concerns Streatham's Chief Inspector, Alistair Sutherland, has introduced a new initiative. Somalis community members will now police their area alongside officers and if extra funding can be accessed, the new 'community observers' will become permanent staff.

BNP doubles its vote share in Becontree

Barking and Dagenham Council
BECONTREE WARD
Thursday 14th July 2005
Alok Agrawal (Lab) ..... 1171
John Luisis (BNP)..... 378
Anthony Chytry (Con) ..... 283
John Bolton (UKIP)..... 125
BNP Percentage: 19.3%

ONE-IN-THREE voters in Becontree Ward in Barking come from an ethnic minority, so for the British National Party's candidate, John Luisis, to poll nearly 20% of the vote in a by-election on July 14th was a fine achievement.

The result in a ward the BNP were contesting for the first time was even more creditable as it was gained in the face of a week-long national television and newspaper campaign against the BNP which specifically targeted the voters of Becontree ward.

Eddy Bulter, from the British National Party Elections Department, was very happy with the result.

"Becontree was not a particularly good ward for us in the General Election with our vote below 10%.

"Despite the usual election pact between all the other parties, our canvassing returns showed that our vote was holding up, but until the last week of the campaign we weren't making inroads into Labour's lead. "Obviously the events of 7th July have influenced the way people voted, and our vote has more than doubled in just 7 days."

The pact with the Liberal Democrats in Barking has bolstered the Labour vote in the two by-elections since the General Election, but overall support for this Lab/Lib-Dem axis has fallen 6%. The Tory vote too has fallen, down 7%, while the BNP vote share has been 27% in the two elections, a rise of 10% on our General Election result.

Points of Interest

■ ROSE Roberts, the Liberal-Democrat candidate at the last Becontree ward election polled 438 votes, a party percentage of 38%. This time the Liberal Democrats didn't stand so as not to split the non-BNP vote.

■ LABOUR Party activists from Romford canvassed for the UKIP candidates in both the Goresbrook and Becontree elections in an effort to syphon votes away from the British National Party.

■ THE Barking & Dagenham Recorder carried its usual eve of poll message from London mayor, Ken Livingstone, asking people not to vote for the BNP.

CURRENT VOTING TRENDS Barking by-elections

	7/5/05	NOW	Diff
Labour	49	55	(+6%)
BNP	17	27	(+10%)
Conservative	17	10	(-7%)
Lib-Dems	12	0	(-12%)

Leaflet exposed Labour's legacy

THE media frenzy over a BNP election address distributed in the Becontree by-election didn't surprise Freedom editor, Martin Wingfield, who together with London organiser, Richard Barnbrook, produced the "Maybe it's time to start listening to the BNP" leaflet.

"It spelt out Labour and the Tories culpability for the London bombings because of the illegal war with Iraq that they took us into, so it was predictable that their friends in the media would get upset," Martin told Freedom, and he had this to say on using a photo of the No.30 bus.

"The photograph came from the internet and appeared on all TV channels and in almost every newspaper. The wrecked bus was a graphic illustration of the consequences the British people had to suffer because of Tony Blair's catastrophic error of judgement in going to war in the Gulf.

"I'm certainly not going to be lectured on good taste by editors who used the exact same image just to sell their newspapers. I used the photograph to make a valid political point concerning the war in Iraq and the growth of Islamic extremism in Britain.

"Our vote in Becontree ward doubled after the distribution of the leaflet. Whether that was just down to the leaflet itself, or to the public's recently increased worries over immigration remains to be seen."

British National Party WHERE WE STAND

CRIME: A crack-down on crime with more 'Bobbies on the Beat'. Tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of the death penalty for child killers and terrorists. Zero tolerance for drug-dealers and violent thugs.

IMMIGRATION: An end to immigration and the scandal of bogus asylum seekers flooding Britain. Use the billions now wasted in foreign aid to fund generous 'Homeward Bound' schemes to encourage immigrants to return to their land of ethnic origin.

INDUSTRY: British ownership and control of British industry and resources, including the mass media. Protection of British jobs and industry by selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.

HEALTH: We will use the vast sums of money now wasted on funding our membership of the EU for the restoration of an effective national health service and proactive measures to produce a healthier population in the first place.

EUROPEAN UNION: British withdrawal from the European Union. We will trade with Europe where it benefits Britain, but want no political ties or monetary union.

EDUCATION: A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and an end to 'trendy' teaching methods which have failed our children so badly.

ENVIRONMENT: A healthy environment for a healthy people - the protection of our countryside; a ban on greenfield-site house building except in exceptional cases of genuine local need and an end to field trials of genetically modified crops.

FARMING & FISHING: The regeneration of British farming, with the objective of achieving the maximum self-sufficiency in food. The restoration of the fishing industry through protection of our traditional fishing grounds.

GOVERNMENT & COMMUNITY: The establishment of a government that puts British interests first. A return to healthy moral values and policies aimed at strengthening the family and community. Tough penalties for corruption in public life.

FREEDOM: A massive expansion of freedom and democracy to roll back the erosion of our traditional freedoms and truly reflect the wishes of the people. The adoption of popular referenda and high technology direct democracy.

DEFENCE: An alternative defence strategy based on the principle of armed neutrality. No British blood should be shed in conflicts which do not involve British interests. The restoration of the County Regiment system and the reversal of defence cuts which have weakened our Armed Forces and cost thousands of jobs.

REMEMBER! It doesn't matter if you don't agree with us on every last thing. Like all other democratic political parties, the BNP includes some members who disagree with one or two policies. Just ask yourself whether you agree with more of our policies than those of the other parties. Most people do, which is why we are the fastest growing political party in Britain today.

TB screening vans back on the streets of our capital city

PUBLIC HEALTH experts have admitted that current measures to control Tuberculosis (TB) have become ineffectual in areas with a large immigrant population.

Although the Bacillus Calmette Guérin (BCG) vaccination programme, introduced in the 1950's when there were 50,000 cases in Britain, has proved highly successful in reducing TB rates in the white population, the disease is on the increase in multi-ethnic, inner city areas. Cases of TB rose by 25% in the UK, with most of those infected originating from Africa and the Indian-subcontinent where TB is epidemic.

Chief Medical Officer, Sir Liam Donaldson, explained that the BCG vaccination would no longer be compulsory for all schoolchildren because many live in areas with an "extremely low risk of infection." Instead, the vaccination would be targeted on those children and older people living in high risk areas who are most likely to catch the disease.

TUBERCULOSIS: Eradicated from Britain in the 1950's now back with a vengeance thanks to immigration.

It is estimated that eighteen local authorities, 13 of which are in London, fall into this 'high risk' category, with the level of infection in some boroughs rising as high as in third-world countries. The programme will be aimed at new immigrants and children whose parents or grandparents were born in high risk regions.

In addition to the targeted vaccination programme, the Chief Medical Officer announced that tuberculosis screening vans will return to London streets - where 50 per cent of Britain's 7000 TB cases occur - for the first time since the Fifties.

Lack of funding cuts language courses

OXFORD Brookes is cutting more than half its modern language degrees on the grounds that they are no longer financially viable.

The cuts are part of a "restructuring" process that will see German, Italian and Spanish degrees phased out over four years. But thanks to help from the Higher Education Funding Council, Brookes will continue to offer degrees in Japanese.

A television in the bedroom harms a child's development

PARENTS who allow children to have televisions in their bedrooms risk limiting their child's academic progress, as well as damaging their health and social well-being.

A series of studies carried out recently by scientists in New Zealand found that children with a TV in their bedroom scored lowest in achievement tests and are the least likely to leave school with qualifications and access higher education.

Research leader, Dr Thomas Robinson, has conducted previous studies which show that decreasing a child's time in front of the TV can reduce obesity, aggressive behaviour and advertising induced 'parent pestering'. A television in a child's bedroom has, however, become the norm and parents, he pointed out, are giving up any control over how much and what their children are watching. "They have no idea if they are watching all night, or if they are watching violent or sexually explicit content."

Bedroom TV viewing has also been linked to the decline of children's reading standards, with adult content soaps and reality shows replacing the traditional bedtime story.

It is clear that action needs to be taken. Parents who wish to protect their children from the negative effects of extensive TV viewing, should banish television from the bedroom and return to the old favourite of the bedtime story.

Labour's academy flagship flounders

by Tina Wingfield

THE Government has diverted another £1.4 million from the over-stretched education budget to bail-out one of its failing £25 million flagship academies.

The hand-out forms part of a recovery package for Unity City Academy in Middlesbrough, which was recently criticised by the education watchdog, Ofsted, for 'failing to give its pupils an acceptable standard of education.'

Unity City is just the first in what will inevitably be a long line of failing academies succeeding only in bleeding dry the schools' budget. The majority of the Government's new academies - 17 of which have been established since 2002 in inner city areas at a cost of £425 million - are already languishing at the bottom of the performance league tables.

Despite the fact these academies are under-performing even in comparison to the failing schools they were created to replace, the Government intends to press ahead with its plans to squander another £5 billion of taxpayer's money on establishing a further 183 academies.

Yet, countless community-based secondary schools - many requiring little more than adequate financing and a return to traditional style education to turn around their fortunes - will be sacrificed to make way for this excessively expensive experiment with our children's futures.

The new academies will drain urgently needed resources from the education fund, yet as privately sponsored ventures they are free to operate outside of local authority control. In exchange for up to £2m - a tiny fraction of start-up and operational costs - unaccountable private bodies have control over the day-to-day running of the academy. Unlike other state financed schools, academies can set their own curriculum and are free to employ staff who are not registered with the General Teaching Council.

So who are these 'private sponsors' that Labour is willing to entrust with our children's educational welfare?

Dubai-based Global Education Management Systems (GEMS), currently runs the Bexley Business Academy in Kent, in addition to another 50 private schools worldwide. Although the academy scheme is widely rejected by parents and teachers, GEMS is confident that it will be given the go-ahead to establish a new 'through' academy (combining primary and secondary education for the 4-18 age group) in North London. Confidence inspired, no doubt, by the fact that the Government official responsible for the decision was employed as a company adviser up until May of this year!

Absolute Return for Kids (ARK), is also developing a network of 'through' academies, even though it has no experience of running education services. ARK was established by French playboy, Arpad Busson, who made his money hedge fund dealing on behalf of investors such as the Bin Laden family.

Under the present regime Britain is rapidly becoming the worst educated major nation in Europe. Labour's plan to squander £billions of taxpayer's money on effectively privatised, unaccountable academies, employing untested teaching techniques will accelerate this decline in education standards.

The only way to restore Britain's schooling system and ensure that future generations are not lost to illiteracy and ill-discipline, is to invest public funds in upgrading and enhancing our existing capable but resource impoverished, community schools.

A return to the 'O' and 'A' level system, coupled with a commitment to competition, excellence and national pride will enable our education system to produce adults fit to face the challenges of the future.

MIDDLESBROUGH: £900,000 was spent on the academy's ceilings, but this didn't improve education standards.

Pass marks lowered again despite warning over basic skills

AN INCREASING number of students leaving school with A* to C grade GCSE qualifications still lack basic skills in literacy and numeracy.

That's according to research carried out among leading employers in the City of London. The situation has become so dire that recruitment consultancies working on the employers' behalf are resorting to offering business, administrative and secretarial post candidates further training in basic English and arithmetic skills.

Universities also report that they are increasingly having to introduce 'catch-up' classes in the first year of maths courses. Coventry University revealed last year that students with a B grade in maths A-level were scoring little better than those who failed the exam ten years ago.

Despite this shocking decline in basic educational standards, the Qualifications and Curriculum Agency (GCA) has decided to again lower the pass marks required for maths and English tests, to 23% and 32% respectively.

Labour rejects advice to stop course closures

A GOVERNMENT task force, set up to investigate the decline in key subjects such as maths and science in higher education, has rejected calls by leading academics for measures to be introduced which prevent universities from closing courses.

Sir Howard Newby, chief executive of the Higher Education Funding Council for England (Hefce) described these subjects of strategic national importance as "19th century disciplines" and warned that further maths and science course closures are inevitable.

Taxpayers fund retail therapy

STUDENTS completing a first SBTEC diploma in retail (which will qualify them to apply for shop assistant positions) at the College of West Anglia in Kings' Lynn are being rewarded with an all-expenses-paid jaunt to New York which will include a tour of all the city's leading stores.

Answering to criticism from fellow students who have had their courses at the college axed due to a lack of government funding, a spokesman for the Learning and Skills Council explained that, "going to America is about helping students to realise that retail is an international business."

Admissions test

UNIVERSITIES will pilot a new generic admissions test in September, to identify the brightest students. It is being introduced because vice-chancellors have lost faith in the A level grading system.

British Gas offshores 2,000 jobs to India

GAS and consumer services company, Centrica, is closing four of its British Gas sites in northern England with the loss of 2,000 jobs and transferring the work to India.

PROFITS FIRST: Private companies have no loyalty to Britain and that's why the BNP believes essential services, like gas, should come back under state control.

Offices in Gould Street and Talbot Road in Manchester, as well as in Oldham and Solihull are being closed as what British Gas calls 'non-customer-facing clerical work' is being moved to cut costs.

The out-sourcing of the jobs to India will make savings in operation costs by slashing the clerical wage bill. But don't hold out any hope that these savings will go towards reducing customer's bills or improving services - the money is just for the company's profit column to boost the morale of shareholders.

Trade union representatives from Unison did their usual hand-wringing over the job losses but said there was nothing to be done about it.

Asset stripping will render 101 year-old AA worthless

IT WAS Centrica which made a quick £750 million profit when it sold off the Automobile Association (AA) last year to German private equity firms, CVC Partners and Premira.

It took just three months for the new venture capitalist bosses to start dismantling the company, calling for cuts to 1,300 jobs, including 430 jobs in breakdown patrols and call centre staff jobs in Cheadle and Manchester.

Now the AA is shutting down its emergency breakdown call centre in Maidstone with the loss of another 160 jobs and looking to offshore the work to India.

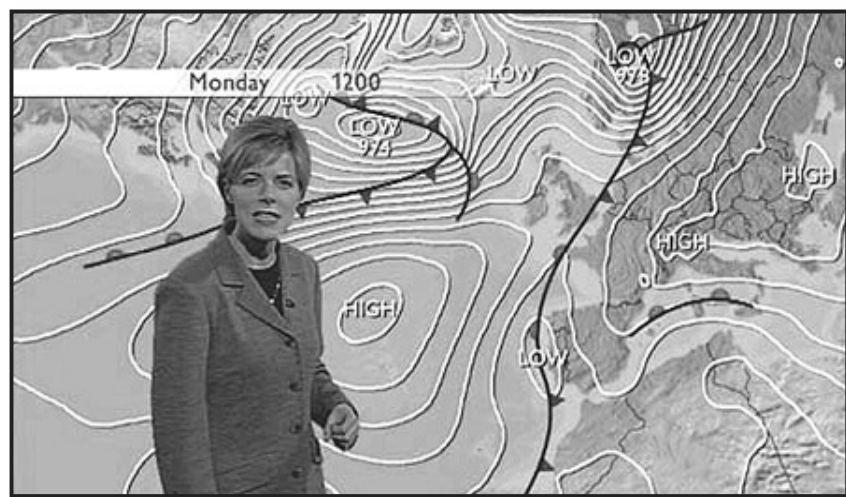

The AA was founded in 1904 as a mutual society for the benefit of motorists, but now, despite its 15 million membership, it is being asset stripped by City slickers who will leave the company worthless.

OFFSHORE: AA members will be phoning Calcutta to get help for a breakdown in Carshalton.

This is the beginning of the end of the AA and its fine tradition of one hundred years of roadside recovery.

DUMBING DOWN: Met Office expertise will be lost as jobs go across Britain.

Met Office closures to cut costs backfires as contracts are lost

BITAIN'S Meteorological Office is one of the world's leading providers of environmental and weather-related services.

The services it provides meet the needs of the general public, the government and schools, through broadcasters and online media, to civil aviation and almost every other industry sector - in the UK and around the world.

But now that expertise is being lost and Met Office jobs face being exported abroad just to cut costs.

The Bridge of Don office in Aberdeen is one of six regional offices earmarked for closure and this has sparked an outcry with the offshore and fishing industries who describe the local service as vital.

Unhappy with the proposed closure of the Aberdeen office, oil giant, Shell, have said they won't be renewing their £1 million contract with the Met Office, and another contract worth more than one hundred thousand pounds is hanging in the balance.

The closure of the regional offices was part of a bid to save £2 million a year, yet before the cost cutting measures have even been put into place, one year's savings have already been lost. This is because contracts have not been renewed due to customer fears that the truncated service won't be able to meet requirements.

Blood tests go to India to help fund the war in Iraq

NEXT TIME you go to a hospital or to your local surgery for a blood test, your blood could have been to India before you get the results.

Indian corporation, Fortis, has already signed lucrative deals to "offshore" blood testing with a number of British private healthcare providers. Now it has set its sights on doing the same to the NHS. Fortis chairman, Harpal Singh, was in London recently to get such deals rolling.

Skilled British healthcare staff will be dumped on the dole, and your blood will be tested in some steaming subcontinental shop by Indians, with all the uncertainties about their skills, qualifications, and hence the test results. But Fortis are offering to undercut the costs of proper testing in Britain by £400 million a year, and that's much-needed money which could fund Blair's Iraq adventure a little bit longer.

But wouldn't you rather, if you had to have a blood test, that your blood was tested in Britain, by British medical professionals and to required British standards?

BLOOD TEST: Cheaper in Dehli.

Carry on negligent! Balfour Beatty dodge corporate manslaughter charge over Hatfield train crash

by Tina Wingfield

BALFOUR BEATTY, the Engineering corporation responsible for the negligence which caused the deaths of four people and injured over a hundred in the Hatfield train disaster in 2000, has escaped with just a fine.

Despite presentation by the prosecution of overwhelming evidence indicating that the crash was a disaster waiting to happen, Justice Mackay dismissed a corporate manslaughter charge against Balfour Beatty last month. Although he declined to explain the reasoning behind his judgement, it is generally accepted that the complexity of current corporate manslaughter law makes it impossible to secure convictions against large corporations.

Immediately following Justice Mackay's dismissal of the manslaughter charges, Balfour Beatty dropped its 'not guilty' plea to charges under the Health and Safety Act - which the company had maintained throughout the £30 million trial - and admitted that safety standards had been breached.

This 'breach' of safety standards

Safety and service before profit

OUR railway network is less safe since privatisation because the private train companies put profits and dividends before the safety of their passengers.

After the Hatfield crash, 76% of people said they thought the rail network should be renationalised. The entire rail system must be taken out of the hands of profit orientated private firms and placed back into public hands under the democratic control and administration of British rail management, workers and the transport users.

It is the only way to ensure that safety and an efficient service, not profit, is the top priority.

SAFETY: Despite reports of a faulty rail, no speed restrictions were imposed. consisted of a catalogue of deliberate and criminal negligence that inevitably put passenger safety at risk.

Company executives, blinkered by the pursuit of profit maximisation above all other concerns, failed to repair the faulty rail which caused the crash, even though the danger had been identified 21 months earlier.

To cover the fact that a huge backlog of essential work had been allowed to accumulate, managers turned back the clock which counted the time for carrying out repairs to zero and, throwing the safety rule book out of the window, failed to impose speed restrictions in the area of the faulty rail.

Having evaded a corporate manslaughter charge, the maximum penalty now faced by Balfour Beatty for causing death and injury to so many people is a paltry fine. So, in spite of New Labour's 1997 well received election pledge to introduce effective laws to punish corporate offenders, current legislation has again proven to be toothless in bringing big business to justice. The fact that large corporations can escape with fines for causing death, yet company executives face imprisonment for failing to discharge their responsibility to keep the share price as high as possible, reveals that this Government values money over human life.

The Labour Party, once the champion of the people, has clearly embraced a new role as the protector of big business.

We've ways of making you have a Mela

PRESTON'S annual August Mela, which showcases South Asian culture, music, dance and food has been cancelled because of a lack of public support.

The council's executive member for regeneration, community and leisure, Veronica Afrin, warned that steps needed to be taken because the event's cancellation sent "a clear message that the community doesn't have the capacity to organise such events on its own". The council now intends to employ an events co-ordinator to work with various groups to ensure that future multi-faith and multi-racial events take place.

Busy month in Wales

WALES HAS seen BNP meetings held in the North and the South of the country this month at Deeside and in Skewan, Swansea.

Hundreds of pounds were raised between the meetings and many new faces were made welcome. Everyone was upset but not surprised by the London bombs and the subject was debated at the respective meetings. Bill Murray, North Wales area organiser, and some helpers (above) prepare for the meeting near Chester on July 13th.

Progress continues with the best result ever in Leicester

by Wayne McDermott

IT WAS only after very careful consideration that Leicestershire BNP decided to contest the Beaumont Leys by-election for the city council on July 14th.

Although this area of Leicester was not ideal BNP territory with a non-white population of around 30%, it provided a chance to keep up the steady progress the branch has been making. There was a keen team of activists out for the campaign despite it being so soon after we had contested a record number of county council seats and three parliamentary seats.

As usual the local paper, the Leicester Mercury, did its best to minimize the BNP vote, giving the three other candidates a large column each, then right at the end of the by-election report tacking on... "also standing is John Chapman, BNP."

It's disappointing that the Mercury is continuing to deny BNP candidates parity with the other parties. This manipulated election coverage shows that the editors at the paper just want to promote their own political agenda. Our excellent result upset Labour MP, Patricia Hewitt, who at one point in the evening surprised BNP counting agents by resorting to unsavoury name-calling. Clearly we are getting under the skin of New Labour.

Our vote of 9.2% may not seem a noteworthy result to some, but this was a record vote for the BNP in the city of Leicester.

"The media had a well rehearsed plan to soften the impact of the bombings - drip feed the death total and play the bombers as victims themselves."

by Mark Reed

LEEDS BNP held its July meeting on the Wednesday evening prior to BNP Chairman, Nick Griffin, making another appearance at Leeds Crown Court for his forthcoming show trial.

So not surprisingly, Nick was the guest speaker and spoke on the London terrorist attacks. He had the capacity audience riveted as he explained how the media had a well rehearsed plan to soften the impact of the bombings - drip feed the death total and play the bombers as "victims themselves" - all very cleverly prepared to run to a tight pre-written script.

the venue and another 60 were turned away at the door because the landlord was concerned over fire regulations. They also heard speeches from Nick Cass, John Hurst and Chris Beverley.

The talk of the night amongst the audience was of course the terrorist attacks perpetrated by home grown suicide bombers from Leeds, not by radical robe-wearing fanatics, but by Muslims who were known to some people in the room, who had taught their children at school and served them fish and chips.

Far from the twisted media reports, people were not angry but just disappointed that the frighteningly accurate predictions of Nick Griffin about the source of the terror the UK would face, had come true.

The meeting was chaired by Tom Linden who organised a collection which netted £1,500.

100 at Bradford meeting

Duplicity of West Yorkshire police exposed

ON Saturday 9th July one hundred Yorkshire BNP members enjoyed an evening of food, music and entertainment.

The proceedings were opened by Yorkshire regional organiser, Nick Cass. He introduced Darryn Manby, one of Bradford's two organisers, who highlighted the unbelievably biased behaviour by the authorities when dealing with issues relating to 'incitement to racial hatred'. Darryn held up a poster which was being attached to lamp posts within the Muslim strongholds of Bradford, encouraging Muslim women to reject Western values and obey Sharia Law. To press home the message the poster carried a picture of the 'Twin Towers' after the attack on 9/11.

He compared the lack of enthusiasm displayed by the authorities to deal with this anti-western propaganda, with the witch-hunt pursued by the same authorities on BNP Chairman, Nick Griffin.

The final speaker of the evening was West Midlands regional organiser, Simon Darby, who spoke passionately about the challenges that lay ahead for the BNP and the British people in the future months.

Then it was down to the social part of the evening. Our now legendary Yorkshire rock/folk trio was assisted by Mike Bellringer from Wales with the music ranging from English rock to Irish folk and including many well-known singalong tunes.

The buffet went down very well and to show their appreciation of the evening, those present contributed to a collection of £500 to help the BNP continue its fight for Britain's freedom.

Film premiere of BNP's 'EastEnded'

THE FIRST ever British National Party film premier took place in central London on 9th July with the showing of a 55 minute documentary produced by BNPTv called: "East Ended - The decline and fall of the East End".

Paying £10 each for a ticket, over eighty BNP members from the capital watched the informative film written, researched and narrated by National Elections Officer, Eddy Butler, and thoroughly professionally produced by Rod Gordon of BNPTv.

The film took its audience on a tour of East London, returning to the past as well as visiting local landmarks and places of interest.

The British National Party's efforts to save the east End were recorded before its rapid demise as the traditional Brits moved out.

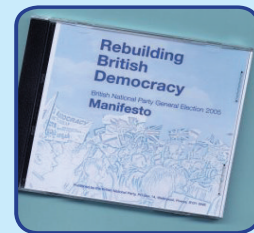

After the showing there was a social, where copies of the film in DVD format were on sale, many of which were signed by the BNP's first ever councillor, Derek Beacon.

Proceeds from the sale of the East End film will be used to fund a second production focusing on the history of Admiral Lord Nelson.

Those who inspire our ideology: No.2 Hilaire Belloc

Hilaire Belloc

An essay on the manipulation of news and opinion, and how to counter it INSIGHT: Hilaire Belloc (left) as a Liberal MP and in the last year of his life (right). His analytical writings were years ahead of their time and none more so than 'The Free Press', an expose of the media's manipulation of the news.

Creating an economy where the power of the banks is limited

by Steve Johnson

HILAIRE Belloc (1870-1953) achieved renown in his lifetime as a writer, poet and man of letters. But he also made an enduring contribution to British Nationalist thought as one of the key founders of Distributism, a real Third Way and the alternative to the failed ideologies of socialism and capitalism.

Disillusioned with establishment politics after 4 years as a Liberal MP, in 1912 Belloc penned The Servile State, his key contribution to Nationalist political thought and required reading for every thinking patriot.

In it Belloc argued that both capitalism and socialism were working to take property and the economic independence it brings away from ordinary people. Concentrating ownership and economic, and hence political, power in the hands of a few plutocrats or bureaucrats, and reducing everyone else to a servile state, bereft of any real power over their own lives.

Eventually the collapse of communism and the rise of global multinational corporate capitalism, owned by institutional investors rather than individuals, was to lead to rule by plutocratic bureaucrats and fund managers. They were also the powerless tools of the remorseless dynamic of global greed and its inevitable results from mass immigration to global warming.

Belloc proposed a radical alternative, which became known as Distributism, in which private property, and hence economic and thereby political power, was to be distributed as widely as possible among the people.

It was an economy made up of small farmers and businessmen, with the necessarily large enterprises owned and run by co-operatives of their workforce. It was an economy in which there would be no place for the power of the banks and the money markets, the Money Power whose blind drive for profit at any price destroys personal freedom and national identity alike.

Belloc's radical ideas inspired a succession of commentators and thinkers of the calibre of GK Chesterton and, later, EF Schumacher, author of the influential Small is Beautiful (1973).

His thinking is reflected in successful enterprises such as the John Lewis Partnership and Waitrose in Britain, and the Mondragon industrial nexus in the Basque country of Spain. The sort of projects that would form the foundation of modern British Nationalist economic and social policy.

MONDRAGON: The industrial co-operative in the Basque region of Spain is a blueprint for any Nationalist social and economic policy.

Edward Heath (1916-2005): A liar and a traitor

NO TEARS should be shed over the death of the liar and traitor Edward Heath, the man responsible for taking Britain into the European Union in 1973 and destroying our fishing industry.

Despite being warned about the fatal damage that the Common Fisheries

HEATH: Sacrificed Britain's ancient fishing rights for EU membership.

Policy would have on British fishing, Heath wrote a secret memo on 21st November 1971 which confirmed his determination to sacrifice the British fishing industry in order to fulfil his aim of taking Britain into the EU.

"If we are to sign a treaty before Christmas, we cannot spend a lot of time on fisheries. We should settle for something limited," he wrote.

Heath was prepared to abandon the ancient fishing rights around the whole coast of the British Isles.

Heath insisted that any attempt to defend British fishing rights was "not going to impress members of the Community." His only concern was that the British people should not know about this secret betrayal.

"What the Prime Minister has in mind" one of Heath's aids wrote "is finding the best formula for presenting the settlement on fisheries publicly."

To Edward Heath, there was nothing wrong with treason and betrayal as long as it could be presented, so as to be acceptable to the British people! Heath's formula was to lie to the British people about the real implications of membership of the EU and Common Fisheries Policies. He told the House of Commons at the time that, "This is not a blueprint for a federal Europe".

Yet in 1991 when asked by Peter Sissons on BBC Question Time whether he always envisaged a single currency and United States of Europe, he brazenly replied: "Yes, of course."

SALLY WOOD Straight talking!

An election clarion call to our brave ancestors

DURING the recent election in Zimbabwe it seems that anything is possible as we find that 800,000 of the dead are on the electoral roll. Apparently in Mugabeland even the dead are allowed to vote, but unfortunately for them under a regime like Mugabe's they will not be given any choice as to how they vote.

This led me to thinking, what if we could send out a clarion call and summon back our dead to vote freely at elections here. To bring back the 5,000 brave archers who fought at Agincourt, the sailors who sailed out with Sir Francis Drake to defeat the Armada, those who fought alongside Nelson at the battle of Trafalgar, and the nearly 20,000 of our soldiers who lost their lives on the first day of the battle of the Somme.

What would be their thoughts if they could return today? I'm sure they would stare in bewilderment at the tracts of our land now occupied by those who neither look or behave like the British.

They would listen in disbelief to our news to hear that our second city Birmingham will be an ethnic majority city within the next 20 years, and they would read with incredulity that 47% of London's school children are now non-white.

They would soon realise that these newcomers to the land are still flooding in and when here are breeding faster than the indigenous British folk, who appear to be cowed and mute to these changes, seemingly shackled by the chains of political correctness.

These brave ancestors would then notice that the three main parties appear to be completely indifferent to the fate of their people and that there is only one party, the British National Party, that bravely shines out like a beacon of hope in the darkness.

The BNP alone promises to stem this onward progression and halt the insidious loss of our land. Our dead heroes would then realise that time was running out for their descendants and if to help them in their hour of need they must put their crosses firmly beside the BNP candidates.

Vive La France

THANK GOD for the French I say, for it seems that they are preparing to put the brakes on Turkey's charge to join the European Union.

According to The Guardian, Britain is still championing Turkish membership and is determined to press ahead with accession talks on October 3rd. It seems that Tony Blair's declaration after the election that he was now prepared to listen to the people was just another of his vacuous statements.

We could in the future have even more to thank the French for, as there does seem to be a general mood of discontent there at the present time and the country could be on the brink of social upheaval.

A leading French sociologist, Gerard Mermet, describes how Europe is in a pre-revolutionary situation and all it needs is just one country to elect a nationalist government and the whole multicultural edifice, so precariously balanced could come toppling down like a house of cards. I believe the likeliest candidate to be France with the Front National gaining 20% of the votes in the first round of voting at the last election. President Chirac's approval rating within his UMP party has fallen to 50%, so such a result is not outside the realms of possibility. The effect of such a result would reverberate around the continent. M. Le Pen would immediately implement measures to prioritise the concerns of the indigenous French and France's muslim population would feel the need to move on: perhaps into the Low Countries.

One can imagine the effect there if thousands of Muslims decided to move in? It wouldn't be long before, in panic, they too decided to elect nationalist governments.

Tony Blair would then find himself staring uneasily across the channel at a million or so muslims all casting their eyes enviously towards Britain and its Government, renowned for its tolerance.

What would happen next?

It was Harold Macmillan, who when asked what he feared most in politics replied, "Events dear boy, events". New Labour would do well to remember that.

Arthur Redfearn wins new tribunal

BRITISH National Party councillor, Arthur Redfearn, has won the right to a new employment tribunal hearing over his dismissal from his job with West Yorkshire Transport Services.

The company sacked the Bradford councillor on 'health and safety grounds' after it found he was standing for election as a BNP candidate. But after a hearing in London, Mr Justice Burton, president of the Employment Appeals Tribunal, ruled that the decision of the original tribunal in Leeds should be quashed.

VINDICATED: Arthur Redfearn is one of four BNP councillors in Bradford.

The new tribunal later this year will have to reconsider whether Mr Redfearn was discriminated against and whether YWTS's claim of health and safety reasons was genuinely founded and properly formulated. Councillor Redfearn believes he lost his job because he was a BNP candidate, despite it being a legitimate political party. Arthur's solicitor, Philip Chapman, said his client would seek substantial compensation at the tribunal if he now went on to win the case. Mr Chapman added: "This case is important, not just for him but there's a public interest as well. It is about the principle of whether somebody can be penalised in the workplace – in this case losing his job – simply because he has chosen to be a member of a particular political party."

BNP campaign for a Miners' Memorial Day

NO ONE knows how many men and boys have died doing their duty for their country in our coal mines. 90,000 died in mine disasters alone in the sixty years before WW1, and including coal dust related diseases such as chronic bronchitis and pneumoconiosis, the total casualty figure is well over a million.

This Labour Government has just given the police their own Police Memorial Day for officers killed in the line of duty, and the British National Party believes that there should also be a Miners' Memorial Day.

There needs to be a special occasion when the country remembers all those miners who gave their lives miles under the ground, hewing out the coal that was the vital energy source in Britain of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

Labour tries to bury the bad news on GM crops

by Nick Griffin

WITH SO much media and public attention focused on the terrorist attacks in London, it was all too predictable that various Government departments would take advantage of the opportunity to bury their bad news.

A shocking example of this was the release on an obscure Government website of the news that GM-modified genes in oil seed rape plants have been found to have jumped into entirely different species of weeds. This confirms what anti-GM campaigners – including the British National Party – have said for years.

Genetically modified resistance to pesticides is going to spread to other plants other than the crops they started off in. This will result in new breeds of 'super weeds' that not only resist pesticides, but which will thereby gain the survival advantage that will enable them to crowd out less invasive wild species, doing further damage to the biodiversity which is the key to the health and beauty of our countryside.

The discovery was published on the website of the Centre for Ecology and Hydrology. It warned that GM superweed characteristics from trial fields of oil seed rape in Shropshire had been found in field mustard and in charlock. According to the supporters of GM crops the gene jump to field mustard shouldn't have been possible, even though it is quite closely related to rape.

Ever since this Labour Government announced its determination to impose genetically modified crops on our countryside and our food chain, various bought-and-paid-for experts have been wheeled out to pooh-pooh the worries about genetically modified superweeds.

So it is little wonder that the Government decided to own up to the latest findings at a time when the media were all looking at the blitzed London transport system. The last time one of their earlier reports produced the unwelcome finding that GM oil seed rape was interbreeding with wild plants the report was posted on the DEFRA website on Christmas Day.

Alone amongst parties at the last election, the BNP Manifesto proposed a massive phased shift towards more traditional, organic, mixed farming in Britain. Our reasons for this are varied but one of them was our opposition to GM crops and the Frankenstein foods that they will produce.

BMA backs BNP over UK's poaching of Third World health workers

by Tina Wingfield

THE BRITISH Medical Association (BMA) has echoed the British National Party in condemning the poaching of Third World health workers by rich nations.

Speaking to delegates at the recent BMA conference in Manchester, BMA chairman, James Johnson, declared that Britain is guilty of an "obscene exploitation" of the world's poor. He described the practice of recruiting thousands of health care workers from developing countries as resource robbery, pointing out that whilst the UK has around 120,000 doctors practising medicine, Ghana has just 1,500 and Mozambique only 500.

Unfortunately, this breath of fresh air from the BMA wasn't backed up with any sensible policy proposals. Their answer to end the suffering of the world's most vulnerable populations – caused by the lack of healthcare arising from British exploitation – is to introduce a "transfer fee" on overseas recruitment.

MANILA'S LOSS: Filipino nurses, who should be looking after the sick of their own country, have been enticed away to work at a hospital in Bolton.

Under this initiative, Britain could continue to rob the poorest nations of their most precious, life-sustaining health care resource, whilst salving the nation's collective conscience by paying a nominal fee for our crime. Sorted!

It would seem then, that whilst organisations such as the BMA acknowledge that poaching essential medical staff from poor countries constitutes obscene exploitation, only the British National Party has the moral conviction to call for a complete halt to the practice.

It is simply wrong for Britain to steal the resources of Third World countries because it is cheaper than investing in our own, home-grown health workforce.

Remember Merchant Navy Day

OVER 30,000 men of the British Merchant Navy were lost between 1939-1945.

To our merchant sailors there was no initial phony war that the people of Britain lived through in those early days.

On September 3rd 1939, a few hours after war had been declared against Germany, the first shipping casualty occurred with the sinking of the Donaldson Line passenger ship, Athenia, with the loss of 112 passengers and crew.

For almost six years there was barely a day went by without the loss of merchant ships and their crews.

The gratitude owed to these men is finally being recognised with the introduction of the official Merchant Navy Day, designated 3rd September every year, the first one held in September 2000.

Freedom asks all its readers to remember the 'Forgotten Fourth Service', the men of the British and Commonwealth Merchant Navy during World War II on Saturday 3rd September 2005.

Lest we forget those who made the ultimate sacrifice.

2000 jobs go as MoD cuts costs

OVER two thousand jobs are to go after Defence Secretary, John Reid, announced the end of storage and distribution operations at RAF Stafford, Llangennech in Wales, and Longtown in Northamptonshire. Reid said the job losses were necessary to cut costs and that a new organisation would be set up to deal with the storage and distribution operation.

This is a devastating blow for the 500 civilian workers at Stafford in particular, who have worked effectively and loyally for the RAF during the last five years of the gradual rundown of military uses for the base.

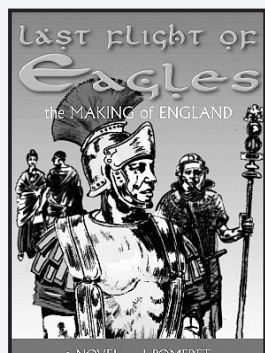

The closure of RAF Stafford will not only leave the defence site derelict, it will hit the local town of Stafford hard, losing the local economy in excess of £17 million.

A Referendum on the growth of Islam in Britain

THE RIOTS OF 1981 in Brixton and Toxteth should have been a wake-up call to the British people that the multicultural experiment being foisted on us wasn't providing the type of enrichment our politicians told us that it would.

The hacking to death of policeman, Keith Blakelock, during a night of sustained violence at the Broadwater Farm estate in Tottenham, north London, in 1985 should again have set alarm bells ringing over the consequences of unrestricted immigration into Britain.

Twenty years on, we now know these events had the opposite effect to what they should have had in any sane society. Instead of stopping immigration and admitting that multicultural societies don't work, the Tory Government of the day found that it was actually the British people who were to blame with their institutionalised racism, while the rioters and murderers were the victims of discrimination, unemployment and poverty.

The terror attacks on London by Islamic extremists should also be a wake-up call for the British people and the consequences of ignoring these alarm bells will change the face of Britain for ever.

Back in the 1980's the rioters and murderers were just criminal gangs of disengaged youths who could ransack and loot their local community because they didn't care about Britain. Why should they? Their culture and country of ethnic origin was thousands of miles away in the Caribbean.

The terrorists of today are very different because they have a religious and political agenda. They are attacking us to weaken our resistance. By showing their power and fanaticism they seek to deter any opposition from a cowed Christian population to Britain becoming an Islamic state.

Twenty years ago there was no political party with electoral clout to rally the British people to oppose the multicultural experiment. Today, fortunately, we have the British National Party, a vehicle through which Britons can make their voice heard.

At the ballot box in May 2006 a very clear message must be sent to Tony Blair and his New Labour Government signalling public concern over the growth of Islam in Britain.

John Tyndall: A very personal type of nationalism

I LAST spoke to John Tyndall at an annual conference on Great Yarmouth pier in September 1979. At that time, John was intent on trying to convince delegates that only he could lead the party to power and should be given a mandate to become its sole decision maker. He failed in his bid and from then on our paths parted.

He introduced me to a brand of nationalism, that in the early 1970's had some political appeal, but with the passing of time and gaining of experience, was revealed to be a very personal philosophy to John Tyndall.

The British nationalism of today, as espoused by the modern British National Party, is far removed from the nationalism of John Tyndall and that is why he was unable to give his support to Nick Griffin despite the huge electoral strides the party had made under his leadership.

An ironic testament to his legacy is that his passing will be mourned more by our opponents, because their leaflets featuring those photographs compromising British nationalism which turn up at every election, will have become redundant over night.

But John Tyndall still has my respect, not only because he founded the BNP but because he kept the flag of 'nationalism' flying for the final twenty years of the last century while other nationalist parties and their leaders were bickering and self destructing.

LEEDS CROWN COURT: BNP Chairman, Nick Griffin, meets the press after his latest court appearance on Thursday July 21st in connection with charges filed under Britain's iniquitous race relation laws.

Policeman speaks out

I WISH to congratulate the British National Party on its measured and intelligent response to the atrocities perpetrated in our nation's capital.

Time will show that your predictions have come about and the blood of innocents is on the hands of politicians of successive parties who have failed to address the inevitable conflict which multiculturalism inevitably brings to a nation.

I am a police officer of twenty years service but since January, I am no longer allowed by police regulation to belong to your party. By the stroke of a pen and statutory instrument, a Home Office Minister exercised Stalinist powers to exclude a democratic legitimate organisation from the exercisable membership rights of an off duty constable.

Let me assure your readers that those matters which you publish and which relate to today's politically correct police are on the whole quite true.

I would ask that you continue to distinguish between the experienced rank and file officers, who like me swore an oath of allegiance to the crown and a solemn promise to serve without "fear or favour, malice or ill will" all of Her Majesty's subjects, and the idiots of the self perpetuating politically correct and spineless oligarchy otherwise known as ACPO (chief officers).

Name and address supplied

Old gang deception

SOPHISTRY, the clever use of arguments which seem true but are really false, has become endemic within our political system and the three main parties use this deception on a daily basis.

The British National Party offers a fourth way, an open, truthful and honest manifesto for the British people.

Far from capitalising on the terrorist attacks in London, the BNP has been the only party in Britain to speak out about the folly, danger and downright stupidity of becoming embroiled into a war where over 25,000 Iraqi men, women and children have already lost their lives in order to sample 'democracy'.

Keep Britain out of foreign wars and keep foreign wars out of Britain!

Alan Bailey, Hornchurch.

Islam and tolerance?

SO the openly homosexual DAC Paddick of the Metropolitan Police, doesn't believe that the words 'Islam' & 'Terrorist' go together.

He should have read the news item carried in the Turkish newspaper 'Hurriyet' today. It reported the public execution by hanging of two teenage boys - their crime? Being gay.

I wonder if Mr Paddick believes that the words 'Islam' and 'tolerance' go together?

Michael Marsden, Arundel.

Britain needs PR

THE REPORT in last month's Freedom on proportional representation will open the public's eyes to the fact that this Labour Government has one of the flimsiest mandates for power in the Western world.

Tony Blair is second from bottom of the league table of democracies with only 35% of the popular vote, even below minority governments such as Spain and Sweden. Among majority governments only Turkey, with 34%, has a smaller democratic mandate than New Labour.

What a shocking indictment of our first-past-the-post system.

Sylvia Jacobs, Bedford.

Are we a free country?

TONY Blair tells us he is spreading 'democracy' and 'freedom of speech', to those countries that don't have it.

Yet behind our backs, he is actually taking away our freedom of speech and our democratic rights!

It is wrong that Nick Griffin could face up to 1 day, let alone 7 years, in prison for simply criticising Islam. You either have freedom of speech for ALL or you simply do not have it.

It all sounds like something from George Orwell's nightmare novel 1984, but unfortunately this is really happening in Britain today.

Ellison J. Peterson, Shropshire.

Grateful to this country

AS A member of the Hindu community I have been surprised at the refreshing and mature view of the BNP, which appears to be the only genuine party that cares for Britain.

I realise that being a member of an ethnic minority, there is conflict with some of the BNP's policies. Although I may not agree with everything you have to say, it should not distract us from building a Britain whose core values lie in the British way of life. A way of life shared by Britons and those people who have the same value and outlook.

Extremist Islam is a threat to ALL as it has a vision and strategy of destruction of western civilisation.

I have great respect for the British people and am indebted to this country for the opportunity it has given me.

Hindus hope to work for the betterment of the United Kingdom and enjoy the freedom, prosperity and liberty this land offers.

Mr W. Pol, Southall.

Population increase

BBC Radio 4 have a financial Breport programme on each Saturday lunchtime.

Recently, very sympathetically, they raised the issue of Muslim families in Britain having such a problem knowing where to invest their Children's Bonds in order to comply with Sharia law!

What was quite surprising was that the presenter revealed that 120,000 Muslim children had been born in Britain in just the last two years.

That's a population increase of over 10% in just 24 months!

David Hamilton, email.

Beeb is too white

THE POLITICALLY correct governors at the BBC are saying that the Corporation's choice of comedy programmes are too white and too middle class.

No doubt that will mean changes to the schedule and I suppose we can look forward to pc re-works of traditional classics such as Balti Towers, Tariq and Jamilla, Love thy Neighbour (a Cherie Blair rewrite) and Hin-du-hi.

It does appear that the BBC is turning its back on traditional Britain.

YouGov poll exposes gulf between Islam and Britain

A YouGov poll for the Daily Telegraph on 23rd July found a staggering 32% of British Muslims think Western society is decadent and immoral and should be brought to an end. That's nearly three-quarters of a million people over the age of 18 living in our country who want to see an end to the British way of life. Equally disturbing is the revelation that nearly half of Muslims living here do not feel completely loyal to Britain. One-in-ten did not feel ANY loyalty to Britain, 33% said they were only FAIRLY loyal and 6% were not VERY loyal. On the recent terrorist attacks in London there was more bad news for the beleaguered British people, with 24% of Muslims living in the UK sympathising with the motives of the British bombers and a worrying 6% - 150,000 people over the age of 18, believing the bombings to be justified. The huge gulf between British society and Islamic society was graphically illustrated on the day of the poll when in Iran two boys, aged 16 and 18, were

WORLDS APART: Two boys, aged 16 and 18, were publicly flogged and then hanged in Iran after being found guilty of theft and homosexuality. publicly hanged for charges of theft and homosexuality. The execution took place in the city of Mahsad, in an open-air square for all to see. Mahmud Asgari and Ayaz Marhon were sentenced to 228 whiplash strokes before the hanging. The age limit for the death penalty is just nine years old for girls and 15 for boys in Iran and in 2003, a 16 year-old girl was publicly hanged after an extra-marital relationship.

Czech Premier makes link between immigration and terrorism

AGREEMENT: Vaclav Klaus echoes the concerns of the BNP.

THE EXCESSIVE openness of Britain to immigrants from other cultural environments facilitates the attacks by radical Islamists. Czech President, Vaclav Klaus, has echoed the concerns of the British National Party in an interview with the newspaper, Mlada fronta Dnes, on July 23rd. "Mass emigration has emerged as a false ideology according to which there exists a kind of claim, a general human right to wander anywhere around the world. This suppresses the civil rights of the original inhabitants.

"If people leave for a place, they should fully accept the place." The President also said that multi-culturalism is a tragic mistake of western civilisation for which all will pay dearly. "Such openness is not the direct cause of terror, but it is terrorism's fundamental cause. Multi-culturalism can be compared to the role Karl Marx's teaching played in the crimes of communism. "Multi-culturalism is an ideology that says that you should emigrate and to make claim to your civilisation, your group and ethnic interests in the new countries," he said.

Nick Griffin returns to speak in Oldham

BRITISH National Party Chairman, Nick Griffin, returned to the scene of his greatest triumph on 26th July when he spoke at Oldham BNP's meeting.

It was in Oldham back in May 2001 when the BNP made that all important electoral breakthrough with Nick polling over 16% at the General Election and the images of him with a gag around his mouth and in his 'Gagged from telling the truth' T-shirt, were beamed around the world.

Oldham BNP organiser, Anita Corbett, introduced Ian Collinwood who talked about the need for the BNP to work at a local level, taking ownership of their communities and playing a leading role in the rebuilding of them. He detailed the vast number of grants that were available for local projects and how it only took three people to set up a community association and a bank account for that group.

Nick Griffin outlined the BNP's response to the bombings of 7/7 which was to focus squarely on the politicians who have allowed the whole situation to happen.

Nick said the British National Party was the only political party to offer constructive policies to get Britain out of the dire situation the country found itself in.

The meeting closed with Anita announcing a healthy collection, thanking BNP security, the catering team who put on an excellent buffet and Excalibur for offering a wide range of products to buy.

FULL HOUSE: Nick Griffin addresses members and friends of Oldham BNP.

POLL DEBUT: Carrie Cassidy with some of her campaign workers at the Overton ward count. It was the first election for the BNP in Great Harwood.

Our 12% in Great Harwood helps educate the Tories

CARE WORKER, Carrie Cassidy, was taking on three former councillors when polling nearly 12% of the vote for the British National Party's first election in a ward for Hyndburn Council.

Mother-of-two Carrie, 31, received 191 votes from voters in the Overton Ward in Great Harwood, nearly three times as many as the Liberal Democrat candidate who trailed in fourth.

But the real story of the night was the Tories blaming the BNP for losing one of their safest seats on the council. Conservative Party workers were shocked and angry as the result was announced and rounded on the BNP contingent accusing them of handing the seat to Labour.

"They seemed to be under an impression that we should be helping them beat Labour," Burnley Organiser, David Shapcott, told Freedom.

"We see both Labour and Tory policy as equally detrimental to the people of Hyndburn."

"But I made it very clear to them that we see both Labour and Tory policy as equally detrimental to the people of Hyndburn. In fact I told them that it was our aim to replace the Tories as the main opposition to Labour in the borough and that this result was the first step in this direction."

Carrie Cassidy campaigned on the need to upgrade the town centre and for more neighbourhood wardens for Great Harwood to deal with the problems of littering, nuisance in public places and the drug pushers and addicts who gather near the War Memorial.

"We had a very positive response

A LABOUR Party supporter has launched a campaign to try to stop the local BNP selling Freedom in Blackpool town centre.

'Outrage at BNP stall' was a story run in the Blackpool Gazette on July 28th after Ketlan Ossowski from Lancaster said he was horrified that the BNP stall was still selling papers despite his numerous complaints to the council. Blackpool BNP organiser, Roy Goodwin, told the Gazette:

"BNP literature offers a true reflection of what is happening in the country today, if anyone is upset by that they don't have to buy a copy."

"Selling Freedom in Blackpool is permitted under trading standard laws."

Gateshead papersale

ASPONTANEOUS papersale in Gateshead town centre on Saturday 23rd July sold 50 copies of Freedom in just an hour.

"We could have sold more but that was all the newspapers we had," said North East Regional Organiser, Kevin Scott.

"It was to test the water in the changed political climate since the terrorist attack on London. We were very well received by Saturday morning shoppers and will be back again in the future."

Members' drive in Southend

AT THE beginning of July, over 50 British National Party members and supporters attended a meeting of the Southend Branch in Essex.

Local organiser, Stuart Freeman, reported on the highly successful campaign of the past few weeks to visit everyone on the branch's substantial membership list. He said this renewal drive emphasised the importance of keeping in touch with all members and maintaining our own nationalist community within Southend.

The guest speakers for the evening were London Regional Organiser, Richard Barnbrook, who spoke on education, and 2004 European Election candidate, Matthew Single, who spoke on how the media promotes anti-British propaganda to manipulate the political agenda.

The education theme of the meeting was appreciated by those present who donated over £300 in the collection before enjoying a social afterwards. To find out details of BNP activities in Southend email: southend@bnp.org.uk.

Leaflet campaign for Cambridge

THE British National Party started a campaign to leaflet the city of Cambridge with a day of action in and around the Arbury Estate.

Fifteen activists from Cambridge took part distributing over 2,000 leaflets. Area organiser, Paul Ison, told the local newspaper:

"Cambridge BNP believes that local people should be given priority for local council housing and not asylum seekers and economic migrants. "We believe that the interests and well-being of the people of Cambridge should always come first."

BLACKPOOL: Organisers of BNP units in the North West meet at an hotel on the 'Golden Mile' to discuss the Party's strategy for the next 12 months.

New regional committee oversees the North West

ORGANISERS from BNP units across the North West met at an hotel on Blackpool seafront on Saturday July 2nd for an all day strategy conference.

A new regional committee was appointed to assist Regional Organiser, Bev Jones, in running one of the fastest growing regions in the British National Party. The new 12-strong body will specifically focus on the areas of elections, fund-raising, press relations and monthly meetings, leaving Bev Jones free to concentrate on the overall co-ordination and smooth-running of the region.

Delegates reported on the current state of their respective units and the number of council seats each would be contesting at next May's local council elections.

The main speaker was the British National Party's Group Development officer, Tony Lecomber, who briefed those present on the lessons the BNP had learnt from the recent Goresbrook ward by-election in Barking, and how we would use this to assist our efforts next May. The meeting was a great success and confirmed the continuing progress of the party.

"Presentation and organisation now is so much more professional," Paul Stafford the Allerdale organiser from Cumbria told Freedom.

"The BNP in the North West has really developed over the last two years. These conferences are businesslike and informative and when you leave, you feel confident that you are part of something that is on the up."

Pub paper sale in South Bradford

JIM Lewthwaite, one of the four BNP councillors on Bradford City Council, got a great reception when he went on a Freedom papersale to three pubs in his Wyke constituency on Tuesday 26th July.

"The two of us sold 60 copies of Freedom in just over two hours and spoke to a lot of people interested in coming to our next Bradford meeting," Bradford Organiser, Darryn Manby, told Freedom.

"Local people think the world of Jim and he's treated like a bit of a celebrity. People really respect him for standing up and speaking out on their behalf.

"Twelve months ago we would have been asked to leave all three pubs had we tried to sell papers there. Now the landlords welcome us with open arms and are even encouraging their regulars to buy a copy of Freedom."

POPULAR: Jim Lewthwaite is a bit of a celebrity in his Wyke constituency.

The British National Party RECRUITMENT LEAFLETS

£8.00 for 1,000

IMMIGRATION? OPEN YOUR EYES

This hard-hitting anti-immigration leaflet draws attention to the alarming figures that show that Britons will be a minority in their own country by 2060.

BUILDING A FUTURE FOR OUR CHILDREN

Links the BNP's election success in Burnley with our policies on law & order and immigration. Also includes details of membership and the BNP's publications.

IF ONLY I COULD SEEK ASYLUM

Make no mistake, asylum seekers are invading our country. Arriving at the rate of 300,000 a year, it's costing us £1.3 billion annually to look after them.

KEEP OUR CHILDREN SAFE

"These children would be alive today if our spineless politicians had the guts to declare war on paedophiles," says this powerful leaflet condemning child abusers.

CRIME IS OUT OF CONTROL

With soaring crime rates hitting inner city, suburban and rural areas alike, this leaflet outlines the BNP's 'zero tolerance' stance in combatting crime.

STOP THE BUILDING!

Under Labour, as with the Tories, Britain's greenbelt land is being built on at a frightening rate. We look at the people and companies behind this rural destruction.
